Disparities in Tobacco Product Use in the United States

Among adults age 18 and older the use of any tobacco product varies widely by race/ethnicity, annual household income, and sexual orientation, among other characteristics. Among the different racial/ethnic groups, use is highest among American Indians/Alaska Natives and lowest among Asians. Use is also higher among those with an annual household income of less than $35,000 and lesbian, gay, or bisexual adults compared with those with an annual household income of $100,000 or higher and heterosexual/straight adults, respectively.
