

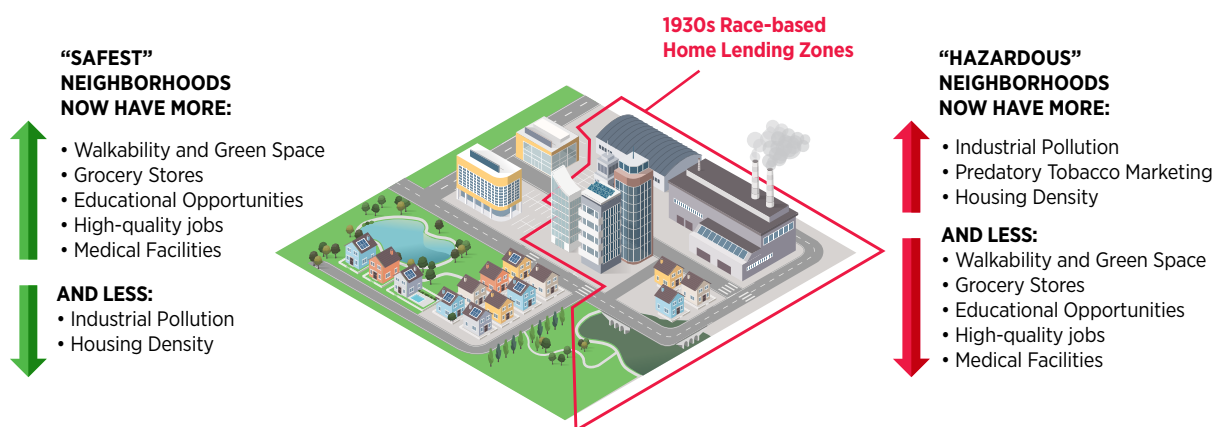

FIGURE 23

How Redlining Underlies Cancer Disparities

In the 1930's, neighborhoods were classified on how “safe” they were for investment based on the race and ethnicity of residents. This made it harder for racial and ethnic minorities to receive mortgages in order to buy homes and has led to numerous inequalities in educational, economic, and health outcomes.